

ABSTRACT

Deformation process of an element through the application of calibrated pressure on it, applied through compression means sensitive to the variation of the chemical-physical characteristics of said element when it is subjected to a predetermined temperature.